Excerpt: . saw a pig suffering but he went on and when he went two-miles, he turned back to help the pig, that hurt his heart very much, he spoiled he clothes, and he told one of his friends that he had helped a poor pig. An Indian s Power of Observation. BY LOUISE KENNEY (Klamath) in The Arrow. One day when an Indian came to his wigwam he noticed that the venison which he had hung up to dry was gone. After keenly glancing around he started off to find the thief. On his way he met a band of traders, whom he asked if they had seen a little old white man with a short gun, and a little dog with a bob tail. When the traders asked him how he could give such an accurate description of the man, he said, I know he is little by having piled up some stones to reach the venison at the height at which I hung it. I know he is old by his short steps, which I have traced over the dry leaves in the forest. I know he is a white man because he turns his toes out when he walks, which an Indian never does. I know his gun was short by the mark it made on the bark of the tree, where he leaned it. I know his dog was little by its short steps, and I know it had a...
